For Parents with children ages (3-5 years)

Teacher: Maria Ramos-Yoo

Monday & Wednesday, 12:00-2:00 P.M.

Cost $25.00 materials fee (waivers available)

This course is based on research that supports the importance of parental involvement in the literacy development of their children. The SPACE Program recognizes that parents are their child's first teachers and we believe that continuing literacy development in the home is vital. This parent/child literacy class links home to school and parent to child to teacher. It provides parents with opportunities to learn more about comprehensive literacy and to understand their role in helping their children to succeed.

Each session begins with parents and children working together in an introductory activity. Then the parents meet with a teacher while the children participate in literacy-related activities with a two co-teachers.

As a result of this course, parents will be able to:

- Understand the importance of their involvement with their children's education
- Increase their understanding of their role in the literacy development of their children
- Learn effective strategies that are used to teach children how to read and write
- Have opportunities to practice strategies with their children
